THAT Russia is covetous of Kores, or at least a part of the peninsula, no sensible perso can doubt. The time when she will attempt to put her designs into execution must. however, remain a matter of speculation. It may be in a year, or not for twenty five years, or even fifty years, but the blow will be struck as soon as the opportunity seems ripe. We may expect, however, to receive some previous notice of the event from the Japan Mail, which journal professes to know all about it. On the fete day of the Russian Emperor, the 11th September, our contemporary was reminded of quite a number of things, concerning which it wrote a leading article, in much the same strain as a more conventional journalist might write complaints or wishes on the subject of over- then proceed to Canton. at the opening of a new year.
